

I pay for satellite radio and am delighted with the service. I also have two sat. dishes. (C-band + Direct TV) Local programming on XM no great deal to me. On the other hand there is no full time network affiliate anywhere nearby. If NAB is concerned about competition then their members should establish something like 24 hour outlets in rural areas. i.e. 24 hour news etc. In other words don't understand what the fuss is all about. As far as I can see the majors have nothing around here for the sat. radio to compete with anyhow. So what's the fuss?

Perhaps we have a little camels nose in the tent syndrome here.
